Magee was injured while trying t since 1899, when the National League condensed from a twelve to an eight club league. The Giants' visit here netted them little glory or money. The Indians beat them by a score of 3 to 2, and only some 3,000 Sixth City fans came out to inspect Bennie Kauff, Charlie Herzog and Larry Doyle.

Lee Fohl opposed the Giants with Lambeth, one of his latest recruits, and the kid did well. The Giants bumped him for a run in the second and third innings, after which he steadled. Ed Klepfer pitched the last four innings for Cleveland, and kept the Giants away from the plate. McGraw sent in a three man relay, Rube Benton going the first four innings, "Ple" Way the next two, and Ferdie Schupp sweeping up. The Indians tied up the game on Way with two runs in the sixth, and won on Schupp in the ninth.

Both clubs started with their regular showed Cleveland how he happened to lead the National League in batting last season by pumping out a triple and two singles. Benny Kauff touched off a double and a single. Robertson made two pretty running catches in the second inning, taking hits from both Chapman and Daly.

Magee was injured while trying to beat out a bunt. He slipped and fell over on his right ankle, spraining it. The speedy outfielder was removed from the game intended and peame mended in the game intended the part of the trick of the injury at the time, but after the exhibition the ankle swelled up and became painful. Magee's injury caps the series of accidents which took as their victims Fritz Maisel, Nick Cullop, Frank Baker and Hughie High.

Bill Donovan was hopeful that Magee would be able to play in a few days, but the condition of the ankle makes his return in less than ten days unlikely.

Every time one of the New York band showed a disinclination to the task in hand Manager Bill yanked him out and sent in a rested Yank. Ray Fisher took but a sad pleasure in the game, so Wild Bill benched him and went in himself. After the Yanks' leader warmed to be slab work some years ago and he hasn't allowed any of the tricks

The matchmaker of the Olympic A. C. signed Joe Malone and Frankle Conifrey to contest a ten round boxing bout at that club last night. Apparently the boxers were under the impression they had been engaged to wrestle. In any event they did wrestle thirty minutes, and as neither gained a fall it ended in a drawn battle. Malone tried for inside arm locks and got his man in trouble several times.

The double nelson was Conifrey's favorite hold, and he nearly scored a fall in the third period.

It was at a German church concert, quite a few years back, and a smart youngster had just rendered a pathetic recitation. The recitation went strong and the audience, forgetting where they were, burst into vigorous applause.

The venerable preacher became greatly

And it takes a whole lot to upset the equanimity of big, good natured, easy going Robbie. While a scrapper from his boots up, as any one who ever played ball with Robbie will testify to, he is not given to flights of temper, is well balanced and doesn't allow every little thing to open the doors of the goat house and let Nanny go gambolling all over the greensward.

But when Robbie was seen yesterday over in the confines of beautiful Flatbush he was considerably riled. It was all over George Stallings, or rather an article that appeared in a local paper under Stallings's signature.

"You haven't seen me getting unduly signature in the confine of beautiful riled. But when Robbie was seen yesterday over in the confines of beautiful Flatbush he was considerably riled. Don't clap the hands!"

But leaving jokes aside, when "Big Six," Polo Grounds idol for nearly a score of years, marches out on Hen Fabian's grass this afternoon, with his legs covered with red yarn and bearing other marks denoting his new allegiance to the Cincinnati board of directors, it will be a sad sight to some of the old

Hail Herzog and Sallee

If Mathewson were to pitch for his Reds to-day the sob stream might be so strong that they would have to call off the game on account of wet grounds.

However, Charley Herzog will try to dry up the tears of the Giant fans, and so will Silm Sallee. The lanky Sheriff likely will try to pick on the Reds to-day, as he has pitched only one inning since joining the club. There is no doubt that the National Exhibition Company has opened its money bags to bring

Old time ball players frequently asrt that the player of the present is not orked as hard as was the case in the rlier days of the game, and usually lect the pitcher as an illustration of eir contention. They cite the records Charley Radbourne, Joe McGinnity, mos Rusia and other famous "Iron en" in baseball, and defy the present itching corps of the big leagues to produce their equals. Radbourne, with his eighteen vice
